Drug design, often referred to as rational drug design or simply rational design, is the inventive process of finding new medications based on the knowledge of a biological target. The drug is most commonly an organic small molecule that activates or inhibits the function of a biomolecule such as a protein, which in turn results in a therapeutic benefit to the patient.

The inherent specificity and electrochemical reversibility of enzymes poise them as the biorecognition element of choice for a wide range of metabolites. To use enzymes efficiently in biosensors, the redox centers of the protein should have good electrical communication with the transducing electrode, which requires either the use of mediators or tedious biofunctionalization approaches.

Going for gold: The mono- and di-chloroform solvates of  $Au_2(\mu_4-1,2-bis(diphenylarsino)ethane)_2_2$  undergo single-crystal to single-crystal transformations that result in gain or loss of only one chloroform molecule and changes in the structure and luminescence of the digold cation.

Overview of JBC's publication process. For initial submission, authors should prepare their manuscript as a single PDF file. At this stage, the primary goal is for the manuscript to contain the necessary information to enable a full scientific assessment, so while all sections of the manuscript need to be present, references need to be complete, and figures and tables need to be clearly ...
