As always, a quality u-lock connecting your frame to an honest-to-god bike rack is your best bet. If you're forced to leave a bike on the street in Boston Proper overnight, you're wise to add a second lock securing your seat and/or front wheel. As everywhere, thieves in Boston are predominantly opportunists, and a well-locked bike represents a lot more work to steal than some student's newish single speed secured with a flimsy combo cable lock.
