Species in aqueous solutions for which other compilations are available were deliberately omitted as before, and for the same reason electron transfer equilibria of organic radicals were not covered. II/18E2 contains reaction rate data on biradicals, radicals in excited states, and carbenes and related species. Contains CD-ROM.

From free radicals to electronically excited species

Species in aqueous solutions for which other compilations are available were deliberately omitted as before, and for the same reason electron transfer equilibria of organic radicals were not covered. II/18E2 contains reaction rate data on biradicals, radicals in excited states, and carbenes and related species.

Unimolecular decomposition by CH₃ loss has been observed with a half-pressure for stabilization of about 75 Torr for the excited biradicals formed by the addition of triplet 3 (14 CH₂) to both cis- and trans-but-2-ene; as much as 9% of the ¹⁴C activity is found in C₈ compounds formed by radical combination reactions of ¹⁴C-labelled butenyl radicals.
