Susan Gillman's Blood Talk: American Race Melodrama and the Culture of the Occult is a highly original study of race history and race consciousness in late-nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century American literature. The book focuses on a wide range of texts published in the years after Reconstruction and before World War I, and discusses authors seldom grouped together, including Mark Twain, W. E. B. Du Bois, Pauline Hopkins, Sutton Griggs, and Thomas Dixon.
