The C4 pathway of photosynthesis was discovered and characterized, more than four decades ago. Interest in C4 pathway has been sustained and has recently been boosted with the discovery of single-cell C4 photosynthesis and the successful introduction of key C4-cycle enzymes in important crops, such as rice.

C4 photosynthesis occurs in many monocot and dicot families. C4 pathway requires expenditure of some additional energy (ATP). If temperatures are mild and water is abundant, C3 photosynthesis is more efficient.

Comparing the transcriptomes of closely related C3 and C4 species from genera like Flaveria or Cleome (Brütigam et al., 2011) will illuminate the evolutionary trajectories of C4 photosynthesis and reveal the gene repertoire that is required for the transition of a C3 into a C4 plant.

In the C4 pathway, initial carbon fixation takes place in mesophyll cells and the Calvin cycle takes place in bundle-sheath cells. PEP carboxylase attaches an incoming carbon dioxide molecule to the three-carbon molecule PEP, producing oxaloacetate (a four-carbon molecule).

Due to many issues related to long-term carbon dynamics, an improved understanding of the biology of C4 photosynthesis is required by more than the traditional audience of crop scientists, plant physiologists, and plant ecologists.

C 4 carbon fixation or the Hatch-Slack pathway is a photosynthetic process in some plants. It is the first step in extracting carbon from carbon dioxide to be able to use it in sugar and other biomolecules.
