China's Science Policy in the 80's. By Tony Saich

China's rise in science and technology is not an accident. Successive Chinese leaderships have seen S&T as integral to economic growth, and consequently have taken steps to develop China's S&T infrastructures. In the twelfth five-year plan (2011-15), China listed the pro-

This essay assesses various dimensions of China's defence industrial enterprises. It argues that the defence industrial system should be divided into two tiers: tier one, composed of weapons and equipment producers for the military, and tier two, composed of "civilian" industrial enterprises that provided critical inputs for tier one enterprises, and which in national emergencies could be ...
