FISCAL DECENTRALIZATION: THEORY AS REFORM James Edwin Kee, ... That pattern was repeated in other nations. By the mid-1990s, 62 of 75 . 3 developing nations with populations over 5 million were embarked on some form of fiscal decentralization (World Bank, 1997).

FISCAL DECENTRALIZATION: THEORY AS REFORM

Decentralization reform refers to transforming the local institutional infrastructure for natural resource management on which local forest management is based (Ribot). Decentralization is "the means to allow for the participation of people and local governments" (Morell).

Decentralization, deconcentration and devolution: what do

Among developing countries the logic was quite different: coordination and other problems associated with decentralization eroded any commitment advantage, weakening the independence of monetary authorities, and prompting inflationary deficit spending. The result was higher inflation than in more centralized developing states.

Rethinking Decentralization in Developing Countries

centralisation and decentralisation, but between two modes of federalism: bureaucratic and political. This is partly a semantic issue; we have no major quibble with such a characterisation. However we believe that the policy trends in many developing countries described at the beginning of this article do correspond to such a choice.

DECENTRALISATION AND ACCOUNTABILITY IN INFRASTRUCTURE

2 Empirical Evidence on Patterns of Decentralization In this section, we present empirical evidence on decentralization in developing economies, comparing patterns of decentralization with those in developed countries today as well as with the historical experiences of high-income countries.⁵ We establish four main stylized facts.
