Hofstede's cultural dimensions theory is a framework for cross-cultural communication, developed by Geert Hofstede. It describes the effects of a society's culture on the values of its members, and how these values relate to behavior, using a structure derived from factor analysis.. Hofstede developed his original model as a result of using factor analysis to examine the results of a worldwide ...

Play is essential to development because it contributes to the cognitive, physical, social, and emotional well-being of children and youth. Play also offers an ideal opportunity for parents to engage fully with their children. Despite the benefits derived from play for both children and parents, time for free play has been markedly reduced for some children.

British anthropologist Mary Douglas (1973) proposed a two-dimensional ordering of ways of looking at the world: 1. "Group"™ or inclusion - the claim of groups over members, and 2. "Grid"™ or classification - the degree to which interaction is subject to rules. Douglas saw these categories as relating to a wide variety of beliefs and social actions:
