In the current reliability study, it is not necessary to conduct such a clustering analysis because we are focusing only on the reliability of the dHOFC links, while clustering itself is irrelevant to such a goal and will unnecessarily introduce an additional parameter (i.e., the total number of clusters) which could complicate the current study.

Inference on $R = P(X < Y)$, when X and Y are independent Weibull variables with unknown shape parameters, is of special interest. Assuming a common shape parameter for X and Y , approximate lower bounds for R are obtained from complete as well as censored (type-II) samples.
