Galaxies: Interactions and Induced Star Formation - hilaris.es

Nowadays, galaxies are no longer seen as immutable objects: they evolve, interact, merge, blaze, and reshape. Dynamic forces can induce powerful stellar activity able to transform the matter composition and morphology of galaxies.

Galaxies: Interactions and Induced Star Formation

Galaxies 2016, 4, 7 3 of 5 (a) Bar forming in isolation (b) Slow fly-by (c) Bar parameters Figure 1. Left: Stellar density maps in three spatial projections of the simulation with bar in isolation (bar case). The original simulation is plotted on the top left, and below we plot the resulting galaxy after the slow interaction.

induced bars could also form as a result of the interaction of normal-size or dwarf galaxies with a cluster-like potential (Byrd & Valtonen 1990; Mastroiello et al. 2005).In

TIDALLY INDUCED BARS OF GALAXIES IN CLUSTERS

Whether the formation of bars is triggered by interactions or by internal processes has been discussed for many decades. In this work, we study differences between both mechanisms by means of numerical simulations. We relate our analysis to fly-by interactions in different mass groups or clusters according to the velocity of the encounters. We find that once the bar is created, the interaction ...
