Sometimes GIS data contains an excess of detail or spatial information than what is needed for the scale of the map being prepared. Generalization is the method used in GIS to reduce detail in data.

Generalization in GIS ~ GIS Lounge

Cartographic generalization is the process of controlling the amount of detailed information portrayed in a map. This also includes using the appropriate scale, purpose, and medium of the map. This form of Generalization commonly consists of reducing the visual detail of data by reducing the map scale when the map purpose suggests the need for a simpler design.
