science and as a presuppositionless philosophy. Husserl was primarily a mathematician and logician. He was the student of the great German philosopher and psychologist Franz Brentano, who had famously reintroduced the intentionality principle. Husserl was also influenced by the empiricism of David Hume.

unshakeable foundation that subsequently resolved all the crises of foundations in the European sciences. Husserl's positing of this a priori ground was his solution to relativism by grounding science in a solid foundation. Husserl seeks to overcome psychologism and relativism through establishing an a priori and absolute foundation for science.
