some Christians who understand themselves as Evangelicals reject Barth. There are non-denominational seminaries in this country where courses are taught in apologetics and, perhaps, where there are departments of apologetics. Books are being written of apologetics, trying to argue to the world how good, useful, and true the Christian faith is.

Christianity and World Religions: The Contributions of Barth and Tillich David R. Mason* For centuries Christianity proclaimed itself as the sole path to sal-vation (extra ecclesiam nulla salus). Recent advocates of pluralism have radically challenged exclusivism as arrogant and bigoted, and so unchristian.
