Surface tension is the elastic tendency of a fluid surface which makes it acquire the least surface area possible. Surface tension allows insects (e.g. water striders), usually denser than water, to float and slide on a water surface. At liquid-air interfaces, surface tension results from the greater attraction of liquid molecules to each other (due to cohesion) than to the molecules in the ...

K + sensing: A light-addressable electrochemical K + sensor is introduced that consists of a thin polymer film containing an ionophore deposited on a semiconducting silicon electrode. Ferrocene is covalently attached to oxide-free silicon and the electrode exhibits surface confined electrochemistry under light illumination.

Surface tension is an effect where the surface of a liquid is strong. The surface can hold up a weight, and the surface of a water droplet holds the droplet together, in a ball shape. Some small things can float on a surface because of surface tension, even though they normally could not float.
