LOGIC, EPISTEMOLOGY, AND THE UNITY OF SCIENCE

Logic is useful in epistemology because it seems that the world follows some sort of logic. That is, we observe the world, and find patterns that we can describe with logic. The result could be said that logic+epistemology=ontology, the study of what things there are in the world. Logic and epistemology are otherwise completely independent.

What is the difference between epistemology and logic? - Quora

Basically, logic and epistemology are two separate things, but logic is used a lot in most fields of philosophy, including epistemology. Epistemology asks questions about belief and justification and knowledge and things like that.

What is the difference between epistemology and logic

Logic and Epistemology Introduction As indicated in the General Introduction, logic in medieval philosophy was not as narrowly construed as it tends to be in contemporary philosophy. Logic was regarded not merely as the study of the validity of arguments, but rather as the universal instrument of reason (which ...
