lysophospholipid receptors signaling and pdf
Cannabinoid receptor type 1 (CB 1) receptors are thought to be one of the most widely expressed G Î±i protein-coupled receptors in the brain. This is due to endocannabinoid-mediated depolarization-induced suppression of inhibition, a very common form of retrograde signaling, in which the depolarization of a single neuron induces a reduction in GABA-mediated neurotransmission.

Cannabinoid receptor - Wikipedia
Lipid signaling, broadly defined, refers to any biological signaling event involving a lipid messenger that binds a protein target, such as a receptor, kinase or phosphatase, which in turn mediate the effects of these lipids on specific cellular responses.Lipid signaling is thought to be qualitatively different from other classical signaling paradigms (such as monoamine neurotransmission ...
