Soon after 1986 the book went out of print. However, it continues to be widely used and quoted, and due to the ever growing interest in "Magnetic Flux Structures in Superconductors", a second edition is now being made available. An extensive new chapter gives a comprehensive review of developments relevant to high-temperature superconductors.

Large parts of the book evolved from lectures given to graduate students at the University of Tübingen during the past three years. It is the purpose of this book to provide an introduction to the many features of magnetic flux structures in superconductors and to discuss the this field.

Magnetic structures of weak magnetic flux are observed using different spectral lines in network and intra-network regions at disk center of the Sun. The present study deals mainly with a high spatial resolution observation in the magnetically sensitive Fe I 630.25 nm line.

A magnetic flux leakage method was applied to detect damage when inspecting steel wire rope. A multi-channel magnetic flux leakage sensor head was fabricated using Hall sensors and permanent magnets to adapt to the wire rope.
