Paracrine regulation of mammalian oocyte maturation and

Mammalian oocytes are arrested at the prophase of meiosis before induction of maturation by the preovulatory luteinizing hormone (LH) surge. LH also promotes the survival of meiotic male germ cells in the testis. Because LH binds somatic cells, the mechanism underlying its regulation of germ cell function is unclear. We found that LH stimulates Leydig insulin-like 3 (INSL3) transcripts in ...

Mammalian Oocyte Maturation: Mechanisms for Regulation and

In the mammalian ovary, oocytes show a prolonged arrest at the prophase of meiosis I and undergo meiotic maturation only when exposed to the preovulatory LH surge. In testis, up to 75% of germ cells are deleted during spermatogenesis (3), and LH is a survival factor for these cells (4).

Paracrine regulation of mammalian oocyte maturation and

Knowledge of CP in mammalian oocytes is discussed as well as novel approaches that can be used to enhance our understanding of the functional and contributing features to transcript CP and translational regulation during mammalian oocyte maturation.

Cytoplasmic polyadenylation in mammalian oocyte maturation

The fully grown mammalian oocyte is transcriptionally quiescent and utilizes only transcripts synthesized and stored during early development.
