In this study, silver molecular clusters are formed in photo-thermo-refractive glass matrix both by UV irradiation and by Na+/Ag+ ion exchange and optically characterized.

The exaltation of the refraction of a molecule in which the conjugation between parts is interrupted by methylene bridges, determined with the aid of a new system of additive constants, is additive. Exceptions are compounds of the series of triphenylmethane, as well as compounds in which the ...

Silver's catalytic properties make it ideal for use as a catalyst in oxidation reactions; for example, the production of formaldehyde from methanol and air by means of silver screens or crystallites containing a minimum 99.95 weight-percent silver.

Bulk and surface refractive index sensitivity for localized surface plasmon resonance (LSPR) sensing based on edge gold-coated silver nanoprisms (GSNPs) and gold nanospheres was investigated and compared with conventional surface plasmon resonance (SPR) sensing based on propagating surface plasmons.

A unique property of spherical silver nanoparticles is that this SPR peak wavelength can be tuned from 400 nm (violet light) to 530 nm (green light) by changing the particle size and the local refractive index near the particle surface.
