Newquay harbour entrance and Towan Beach. Photo by Nilfanion. Towan beach is the closest to the town and consequently (or perhaps accidentally) known as Town Beach. Towan has easy vertical access "unlike many other Newquay beaches that involve large numbers of steps" and a small sea-water swimming pool.

Cornwall Pictures: View Photos & Images of Cornwall

Newquay was originally the fishing port of Towan Blistra before the new quay was built in the fifteenth century. Among other things, the quay was used for the import of coal and the export of mined ore during the heyday of the tin and copper mining industries. For many years, the main industry was pilchard fishing and salting.
