20 education" (Darkenwald & Merriam, 1982, p. 37), this reflective process involves an understanding of educational philosophy and of one's relationship to the various philosophical schools.

Identifying Your Educational Philosophy: Development of

The philosophy of education examines the goals, forms, methods, and meaning of education. The term is used to describe both fundamental philosophical analysis of these themes and the description or analysis of particular pedagogical approaches. Considerations of how the profession relates to broader philosophical or sociocultural contexts may be included.

Philosophy of education - Wikipedia

Our educational philosophy underpins everything that we do as instructors in the teaching-learning transaction. Our philosophy is based on our assumptions about our definition of learning and our views on the nature of mankind, the purpose of education, the nature of the curriculum, the role of the teacher and the learner, and the nature of the instructional process.

Educational perennialism is a normative educational philosophy. Perennialists believe that one should teach the things that are of everlasting pertinence to all people everywhere, and that the emphasis should be on principles, not facts. Since people are human, one should teach first about humans, rather than machines or techniques, and about liberal, rather than vocational, topics.
