general framework for "platform leadership" in rapidly evolving product systems. Industrial economists subsequently adopted the term "platform" to characterize products, services, firms, or institutions that mediate transactions between two or more groups of agents (Rochet and Tirole, 2003).

The Architecture of Platforms: A Unified View between the two larger platforms was about 7 feet. CECO placed approximately 16 purlins, approximately 20'-6" long, spanning the two larger platforms (see figure 8), and also placed plywood over these purlins; therefore CECO converted this space between the larger platforms (about 7 feet x 16 feet) into a deck.
