Produced Water Volumes and Management Practices Page 7 Executive Summary Produced water is water from underground formations that is brought to the surface during oil or gas production. Produced water is the largest volume by-product or waste stream associated with oil and gas exploration and production.

The problem â€¢ 20 to 30 billion barrels of produced water are generated by oil and gas production operations each year. This is 70 times the

and stream salinity Produced water brine - USGS

Produced water may originate as natural water in the formations holding oil and gas or can be water that was previously injected into those formations through activities designed to increase oil production from the formations such as water flooding or steam flooding operations.

Produced Water 101 - The Produced Water Society

Produced water is a complex mixture of dissolved and particulate organic and inorganic chemicals in water that ranges from essentially freshwater to concentrated saline brine.

About Produced Water (Produced Water 101) Produced water is a byproduct of oil and gas exploration and production, it is generated in large volumes, and it plays a significant factor in the profitability of oil and gas production wells.

About Produced Water (Produced Water 101)

Drilling and fracturing wells produce water along with the natural gas. Some of this water is returned fracture fluid and some is natural formation water. The actual water production of a particular well depends on the well location, producing formation and the age of the well. The quality of the produced water is also dependent on local variables.

WHAT IS PRODUCED WATER Produced water is the aqueous byproduct of extracting oil and gas from the earth. It is a complex mixture of gases, hydrocarbons, salts, and production chemicals. Produced water requires varying levels of processing and treatment to be reused, recycled, or disposed.
