Standardized Tabas Laboratory In-Vitro Efferocytosis

In vitro (meaning: in the glass) studies are performed with microorganisms, cells, or biological molecules outside their normal biological context. Colloquially called "test-tube experiments", these studies in biology and its subdisciplines are traditionally done in labware such as test tubes, flasks, Petri dishes, and microtiter plates. Studies conducted using components of an organism that ...

Abstract Cold atmospheric plasma (CAP) treatment is a rapidly expanding and emerging technology for cancer treatment. Direct CAP jet irradiation is limited to the skin and it can also be invoked as a supplement therapy during surgery as it only causes cell death in the upper three to five cell layers.

1. Introduction. Genotoxicity assessment is an essential component of the safety assessment of all types of substances, ranging from pharmaceuticals, industrial chemicals, pesticides, biocides, food additives, cosmetics ingredients, to veterinary drugs, relevant in the context of international legislations aiming at the protection of human and animal health.

In vitro genotoxicity testing – Can the performance be enhanced?

The most reliable method for generating differentiated cell types is the induction of EB formation, through which ES cells spontaneously develop into three-dimensional, multicellular aggregates of differentiated and undifferentiated cells.

Methods for inducing embryoid body formation: in vitro

To my opinion, ex vivo is a term that should be used when the studies are carried out with an organ or tissue isolated from an intact organism (it is still functional).

What is the difference between Ex vivo and In vitro?

“The 80 or so analytes that have been harmonized are the tip of the iceberg. The majority of tests that haven't been touched, because of technical difficulty or another reason, is the mass of the iceberg below the surface of the water.”
