Fairness and Retaliation: The Economics of Reciprocity

Positive reciprocity is the impulse or the desire to be kind to those who have been kind to us. The principle 'an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth' is the prototypical example of negative reciprocity.

Fairness and Retaliation: The Economics of Reciprocity

According to this assumption people maximize their material well-being and ignore the well-being of others. In this chapter, we question the omnipresence of the homo economicus as assumed by conventional economic theory. We review empirical evidence, which impressively suggests that reciprocity is a powerful determinant of human behaviour. Moreover, we demonstrate that reciprocity can fruitfully be incorporated into game theory and economic modelling in general.

The Economics of Reciprocity: Evidence and Theory

Introduction Much of economic and game theoretic modeling has focused on the special case in which agents are assumed to be exclusively concerned with maximizing their own material payoffs. This ...
