Figure 7A is a composite helicorder that is used for the 6 animations of "Seismic Signatures" on the IRIS Animations page. These events have been placed on a single helicorder plot for convenience, though they did not occur in the same 24-hour period.

Using broad-band digital seismic data from Northeast China, South Korea and Japan, we investigated the properties of the recent seismic event occurred in North Korea on 2016 January 6.

thin super-k layers, using their seismic signatures, when different seismic techniques are used together, such as synthetic wave modeling, AVO, and time-lapse analysis. In future work, the convolutional model, AVO analysis, and fluid substitution could be applied to real seismic data for field verification and production monitoring.

Seismic signatures and processing of reflection data in VTI media are the main focus of this book. In some cases, transversely isotropic layers may be dipping, which leads to a tilt of the symmetry axis with respect to the earth surface (TTI medium).
