

socioemotional development across cultures pdf

Socioemotional selectivity theory (SST; developed by Stanford psychologist Laura L. Carstensen) is a life-span theory of motivation. The theory maintains that as time horizons shrink, as they typically do with age, people become increasingly selective, investing greater resources in emotionally meaningful goals and activities.

Introduction. Culture can be defined as "the set of attitudes, values, beliefs, and behaviors shared by a group of people, communicated from one generation to the next." 1 Given that the majority of the world's children do not reside in Westernized countries, and that culture influences development, cross-cultural research on child development requires special attention.
