The effect of trioctylphosphine (TOP) concentration on the growth of nickel nanoparticles is studied using in situ synchrotron small-angle X-ray scattering. The growth kinetics are fitted using a two-step nucleation and autocatalytic growth model. TOP acts as a nucleating agent and then acts as an inhibitor against rapid particle growth.

The effect of counterion activity and surfactant activity on surfactant aggregation is considered. The effect of counterion and co-ion specificity on aggregation properties is successfully evaluated.

Surface Active Agents (surfactants) are vital components in biological systems, form key ingredients in consumer products and play an important role in many industrial processes. For example, cell membranes owe their structure to the aggregation of surfactants known as lipids which form a major component of the membrane.
