sion, and applying surgery to it gives  $M$ . We define a  $\hat{A}$ -surgery to be one in which  $M;M_0$  and  $N$  have  $\hat{A}$ -structures making a  $\hat{A}$ -cobordism. For our applications to  $bP_{m+1}$  we use  $\hat{A} = 0k$ . The change in homology going from  $M$  to  $M_0$  can be easily computed from the homology exact sequences of the pairs  $(N;M)$  and  $(N;M_0)$  and the observation that  $H_q(N;M) \cong H_q(D_{n+1};S_n)$ .

Applying Parse's Theory to Perioperative Nursing Gail J. Mitchell, RN; Christina Copplestone, RN Frameworks for guiding nursing practice range from the nursing process to scientific theory. The frameworks offer different approaches to patients and their health, and guide nurses toward different goals.

practices-and expect the neophyte, armed with the Principles of Good English Teaching, to function effectively in the classroom. Or we can begin with teacher behavior and evolve a canon of appropriate practice based on what is effective in classrooms and buttress this canon by an induced methodology.

4 Practice theory as practical theory Practice theory (in this case the workpractice theory of Goldkuhl & RÄ¶stlinger, 2006) is a theory about practices and their action elements. This means that this theory, per se, is an example of referential pragmatism. One of the main purposes of workpractice theory is to

Enough machinery is developed to prove the main result of surgery theory: the surgery exact sequence computing the structure set of a differentiable manifold  $M$  of dimension  $> 5$  in terms of the topological K-theory of vector bundles over  $M$  and the algebraic L-theory of quadratic forms over the fundamental group ring  $Z[\pm 1(M)]$ . The surgery exact sequence is stated in Chapter 1, and finally proved in Chapter 13.
