We use baker's yeast to study the process underlying meiosis and meiotic recombination. We are particularly interested in the surveillance mechanisms, or checkpoints, that provide the regulatory framework for the step-by-step progression of many meiotic events.

Chromosome segregation is the process in eukaryotes by which two sister chromatids formed as a consequence of DNA replication, or paired homologous chromosomes, separate from each other and migrate to opposite poles of the nucleus. This segregation process occurs during both mitosis and meiosis

An autosome is a chromosome that is not an allosome (a sex chromosome). The members of an autosome pair in a diploid cell have the same morphology, unlike those in allosome pairs which may have different structures. The DNA in autosomes is collectively known as atDNA or auDNA.. For example, humans have a diploid genome that usually contains 22 pairs of autosomes and one allosome pair (46 ...

The 'lampbrush' phase of extended chromosomes during meiosis has also been suggested to enable forms of genetic re-processing. In non-mammals this extended phase involves open transcription of coding and non-coding regions and has been proposed to be a form of genetic processing (Wolfe R757), which probably occurs in a less obvious way in mammals as well.
