Clinical immune phenotype of the patients with CHARGE syndrome Overall, 13 of the 20 patients (65%) with CHARGE syndrome had a past or current history of recurrent OM, defined as greater than 2 doctor diagnosed OM per year.

The Immune Phenotype of Patients with CHARGE Syndrome

Appropriate colonization is influenced by the prebiotic effect of breast milk oligosaccharides. Adequate colonization results in an innate and adaptive mucosal immune phenotype via communication between molecular patterns on colonizing bacteria and pattern-recognition receptors (e.g., toll-like receptors) on epithelial and lymphoid cells.

Immune-phenotype profiles associated with both squamous cell carcinoma and solid-organ cancer in kidney transplant recipients and depended on the presence of cancer tissue.

(PDF) The immune phenotype may relate to cancer

Before trying to identify both the genetic and environmental reasons for those individual differences we first need to define and characterize different immune responses – immune phenotypes. By characterizing the response to stress and infection we will create reference values ranges for a number of immune phenotypes for a healthy population.

Defining the Immune Phenotype for Glioblastoma Multiforme

Many leukemia patients suffer from dysregulation of their immune system, making them more susceptible to infections and leading to general weakening (cachexia). Both adaptive and innate immunity are affected. The fruit fly Drosophila melanogaster has an innate immune system, including cells of the myeloid lineage (hemocytes).

Based on these principles we established robust 7- to 9-color panels for leukocyte profiling capturing the characteristics of the normal immune phenotype of different T cell, B cell, and DC subsets, and their activation status.

Visualize Immune Cells in situ The Mantra workstation is an easy-to-use and compact instrument for the visualization of immune cells in situ within FFPE tissue sections. This multispectral imaging system can seamlessly transfer data, following algorithm development, from image to analysis, performing automatic phenotyping without user intervention.
