"Introduction to Phylogenetic Classifications" ... being classified, the general biological classification system should be used to reflect the tree of life. Phylogenetic taxa will thus be "natural" in the sense of being the result of the evolutionary process.

Introduction to Phylogenetic Classifications

A cladogram is a phylogenetic tree formed using cladistic methods. This type of tree only represents a branching pattern; i.e., its branch spans do not represent time or relative amount of character change. A phylogram is a phylogenetic tree that has branch spans proportional to the amount of character change.
