Towards the Romantic Age || || Front_matter - [PDF Document]

CONCLUSION These sketches of the development of literature in Russia between the 1750's and the Napoleonic Wars of the first and second decades of the 19th century have shown that there is reason to distinguish between three different literary trends which lead from classicism to the romantic age.

Towards the Romantic Age || Conclusion - [PDF Document]

Russian literature between 1750 and the romantic age presents a confusing picture. Various literary movements arose and existed side by side, while new trends made themselves felt. At no other time in the history of Russian literature was there a similar influx of widely disparate literary and intellectual influences from the West.

Characteristics of Romantic literature

composers of the Romantic period were more concerned with how the music made them feel inside. It was very dramatic and spectacular. The orchestra used many more instruments to make bigger sounds. They were capable of making music that was very loud and then very quiet. It often changed from very fast to very slow within the same piece.

The Romantic Period - Weebly

The Romantic Age: historical background The age of revolutions (historical, social, artistic) • American revolution: American War of Independence (1775-83) and Declaration of Independence from British rule (1776). • French revolution (1789): new ideas of freedom and social justice spread all over Europe.

The Romantic age: a new sensibility. The sublime

The early Romantic period thus coincides with what is often called the "age of revolutions"--including, of course, the American (1776) and the French (1789) revolutions--an age of upheavals in political, economic, and social traditions, the age which witnessed the initial transformations of the Industrial Revolution.
