and linear programming (a clean and intuitive treatment of the simplex algorithm, duality, and reductions to the basic problem). The nal Part IV is about ways of dealing with hard problems: NP-completeness, various heuristics, as well as quantum algorithms, perhaps the most advanced and modern topic.

Linear programming and reductions Many of the problems for which we want algorithms are optimization tasks: the shortest path, the cheapest spanning tree, the longest increasing subsequence, and so on. In such cases, we seek a solution that (1) satises certain constraints (for instance, the path must use edges algorithm for checking proposed solutions as dening the search problem. Thus: A search problem is specied by an algorithm Cthat takes two inputs, an instance Iand a proposed solution S, and runs in time polynomial in jIj. We say Sis a solution to Iif and only if C(I;S) = true.

Solution Assume p(X) is chosen as the capacity achieving distribu-tion for the channel X!Y C = I(X;Y) I(X;V) = H(V) H(VjX) H(V) logk Where the ï¬•rst inequality follows from data-processing in-equality, the second inequality follows from non-negativity of conditional entropy and ï¬•nally the third inequality follows from the fact that jVj= k.
